FACING MY FEARS

The thing that terrifies me the most is my math exam! The fear is agonizing and the struggle is real but the efforts are fatal. As a kid, I was never afraid of Math, I actually enjoyed it but then came fractions which destroyed all the good times Math and I had spent, with passing time, our relationship worsened. Then came Algebra, integers, rational numbers, irrational numbers, surface volume and all of these played the role of Kamolika!

I am always miserable a week before my Math exam, to calm myself I seek solace in music and the first line that plays in my mind is "Saari umr hum, mar mar ke jee liye". The pressure is intense and I am on the brink of bursting due to the surface pressure over me, my mother says, "Don't worry, just believe in yourself". But I can sense her high hopes.

Then comes the big day! the exam day. As if, "Hey, did you complete RD Sharma" or "Have you done the optional exercise" are not enough, the topper asks a question which has the least probability but, I feel whatever I don't know would surely come. The exam starts and there creeps in the feeling of life and death.

The paper gets over, on one hand, I am enthusiastic and exhausted on another. Later, much to my surprise, I get to know that I passed the exam. Not with flying colours but "Pant ji ki bitiya pass ho gayi" feels kind of nice after facing and overcoming my fear.
